Dear Sir:-

Again I am writing, I am forwarding a letter, that was answer to mine, a dare, which I feigned to have written two books, if he were interested in its publication, I titled "Germs and Bullets, and "Anything Goes," and want to write "Fools Never Laugh," and "Lightning Strikes Twice".

I have come across "April's issue of "Click," picture magazine, and read his Editorial, its amusing, capabilities, and each one will grasp its meaning of its pictures, I wonder if its not Magish corruptness, having a sense of relativity. I have sent his Editor Emile Gauvreau, Gauvreau, is a French Latin word, meaning, would had, my opinion, if "Click", wrote, they welcome, have a Column, of Lauders, and criticisers, some pricking the publishers courage. I'm sure he will not like the criticism I've sent him.

Yours very sincerely,

[redacted]
